Description and History

The General Fund Mental Health Trust Income Account was established during litigation involving the mental health trust. The purpose of the account was to identify the amount of the state's general fund expenditures that were directed to services for mental health trust beneficiaries.

A provision of the mental health trust settlement requires the State of Alaska to maintain services to mental health trust beneficiaries in addition to the services provided by the Mental Health Trust Authority. Use of this fund code helped to identify programs and costs associated with mental health trust beneficiaries and establish a level of state participation in their care.

Funding identified as GF/MHTIA was selected by agencies based on estimated cost of services provided to mental health beneficiaries that were served by existing programs.

AKSAS fund number 11160 is the rollup account for all of the Mental Health General Fund accounts including 34041, 34042, 34043 and 34044. These accounts were reported through FY94 as a nonexpendable trust fund. Beginning with FY95 they were reported as an account of the general fund.

When the settlement was accepted, this fund code was replaced by fund code 1037, General Fund/Mental Health. Proposed use of GF/MH is recommended by the Alaska Mental Health Trust Authority. Changes in mental health funding as requested by the AMHTA must be identified in writing to the AMHTA at the introduction of the Governor's proposed budget (December 15) and changes by the legislature must be described following the close of the legislature.

This code was used erroneously in the FY96 and FY98 budgets; appropriations should have been coded to 1037.
