Description and History

The Alaska Resources Corporation was established to assist resource ventures with funding through the availability of loans. Loans were provided primarily for exploratory drilling, geophysical work, the Seward grain projects, and power projects.

When the corporation was dissolved, the balance of the Alaska Renewable Resources Fund was transferred to the General Fund and state financing arrangements were made for outstanding payments on loans (e.g., power project fund, and debt service).

The corporation and the fund were dissolved in 1984.
