Description and History

The GF Designated Program Receipts budget fund code was established to identify programs in which general fund program receipts fully pay for the expenses of a particular activity or event. Money appropriated with this code had three distinguishing characteristics:

- 1) by contract or federal mandate, the funds are designated for a specific purpose.
- 2) the event or activity would not occur if the receipts were not generated. Examples of such activities include conferences and workshops, Alaska Tourism Marketing Council, and third party travel reimbursements. A second identifying characteristic for general funds that could be classified as "designated" were for those programs that,
- 3) these appropriations have no effect on the state's fiscal gap. (If the receipts were not collected, the agency would not provide the service.)

This fund code was used only in fiscal year 1997. Legislation was passed creating the statutory designated program receipts fund code (1108). Those receipts are not classified as general funds for budgeting purposes.
